

AI and the Future of Finance: How AI is Transforming the Finance Function and the Finance Profession

4 August 2026 (Tuesday), 9.00am-5.00pm
Concorde Hotel Kuala Lumpur

This session explores how AI is reshaping the finance function, focussing on the capabilities, skills, and leadership mindset required for finance professionals to remain effective and relevant.

This programme presents AI through the lens of how it reshapes finance work rather than as a catalogue of tools. We will trace the evolution from automation to machine learning, generative AI, and agentic AI, providing a coherent framework for understanding future developments.

AI demonstrations will be utilised to reinforce the concepts being discussed, and learn to translate insights into actions you can take within your own organisation.

OBJECTIVES

This programme seeks to help you:

- Understand recent developments in AI and why the current wave represents a fundamental shift for finance
- Review how AI is transforming key activities across the finance function, including transaction processing, reporting, planning and analysis, risk management, internal audit and decision support
- Identify practical opportunities to apply AI responsibly to improve productivity, quality and decision-making in finance
- Evaluate how AI is changing the roles, competencies, and career paths of finance professionals
- Recognise the emerging responsibilities of finance leaders in AI governance, risk management, and organisational transformation
- Develop an individual action plan to build AI capability and remain relevant in an increasingly AI-enabled finance profession

METHODOLOGY

Lectures with a finance-first perspective and progressive demonstrations to reinforce the concepts being discussed as well as structured activity that prompts participants to translate insights into actions they can take within their own organisations.
