About the Symposium

Specially designed for the accountancy profession, the MIA Sustainability Symposium (MIA SS) explores how sustainability is reshaping the profession and how accountancy professionals can respond to deliver sustainable value creation.

Formerly known as the MIA Sustainability Showcase, MIA SS 2026 focuses on the profession's next chapter in the sustainability journey—from commitment and compliance to value-oriented implementation grounded in ethics and trust, and enabled by technology.

As organisations implement sustainability reporting requirements under the National Sustainability Reporting Framework (NSRF), accountancy professionals play a central role in credible disclosures and informed decision-making. The Symposium will examine evolving expectations around sustainability data, climate-related and value-chain information, governance, assurance readiness and the integration of sustainability into financial and strategic decision-making.

Through multidisciplinary dialogue and cross-sector collaboration, MIA SS 2026 will explore how the profession can translate sustainability information into practical action, strengthen organisational resilience and create long-term business value.

The Next Chapter of Sustainability: From Reporting to Real-World Impact

Malaysia is embarking on the next chapter of its sustainability journey, harnessing sustainability information to build investor trust and sharpen its global competitive edge. This next chapter is about moving beyond reporting to turn information into decisions, commitments into action, and sustainability efforts into real-world business impact.

The MIA Sustainability Symposium 2026 aims to support organisations in moving beyond compliance-oriented reporting towards credible, decision-useful information that supports sound business and financial decisions.

The Symposium will focus on three key priorities to help organisations translate sustainability reporting into business value:

- Embedding sustainability into business decisions. Integrating sustainability-related risks and opportunities into strategy, financial planning, investment, capital allocation and enterprise risk management to strengthen organisational performance and stakeholder value.
- Building the foundations for credible action. Strengthening governance, reliable data, technology, internal controls and assurance to turn sustainability information into meaningful action.
- Preparing for the next wave of sustainability challenges. Anticipating NSRF developments, Scope 3 emissions disclosure, assurance requirements and emerging areas such as nature-related financial risks.

By the end of the Symposium, businesses and finance professionals will have a better understanding of how to translate sustainability information into practical action that strengthens resilience, manages risk and creates long-term business value, while advancing Malaysia's evolving sustainability agenda.

OBJECTIVES

The symposium aims to enable delegates to:

- 1 Lead sustainability through stronger governance, strategic oversight, and accountability at the board and senior management levels.
- 2 Advance climate action with practical strategies for managing Scope 3 emissions and strengthening organisational readiness for the net-zero transition.
- 3 Translate sustainability performance into measurable business value by linking sustainability outcomes to financial performance, stakeholder expectations and long-term growth, supported by practical action and continuous improvement.
- 4 Build credibility and trust through data excellence with robust governance, effective controls, and technology-enabled sustainability reporting.
- 5 Foster collaboration and innovation by connecting leaders and practitioners to share insights, overcome implementation challenges, and drive sustainable transformation.

Programme

9.00am	WELCOME REMARKS
9.15am	PANEL SESSION: GOVERNING FOR THE FUTURE: BOARD LEADERSHIP, ACCOUNTABILITY AND SUSTAINABLE VALUE With the first cycle of NSRF reports published, investors and regulators are scrutinising whether boards are actively overseeing sustainability or simply approving reports. Effective oversight requires clear accountability between boards and senior management, supported by appropriate governance structures, committee mandates and oversight mechanisms in line with IFRS S1. Boards must also ensure that sustainability-related risks and opportunities are embedded into strategy, enterprise risk management, capital allocation and financial decision-making. The session will examine how boards can challenge management on sustainability targets, transition progress and disclosure credibility, while considering how director education, independent expertise and executive incentives and scorecards can strengthen board oversight and drive sustainability outcomes.
10.15am	MORNING REFRESHMENTS & NETWORKING
10.45am	BEYOND CARBON: NATURE-RELATED FINANCIAL RISKS AND OPPORTUNITIES
11.30am	LESSONS FROM THE FIRST WAVE: WHAT MALAYSIA'S FIRST NSRF REPORTS MEAN FOR BUSINESSES, INVESTORS, AND THE VALUE CHAIN
12.15pm	FINANCING THE TRANSITION: CREDIBLE TRANSITION PLANS AND ACCESS TO GREEN CAPITAL
1.00pm	LUNCH & NETWORKING
2.00pm	PANEL SESSION: BEYOND SCOPE 1 AND 2: TACKLING THE SCOPE 3 CHALLENGE Scope 3 emissions present complex challenges in obtaining supplier and value-chain data, determining appropriate calculation methodologies and engaging suppliers. This session focuses on the practical priorities organisations must address before Scope 3 disclosure becomes mandatory in their respective NSRF phases, including developing a prioritised Scope 3 plan covering material emissions categories, data sources and supplier engagement requirements. A key challenge is determining when actual supplier data can be obtained and when estimates and assumptions are necessary, and how these choices and the application of the GHG Protocol Scope 3 Standard and IFRS S2 measurement framework affect the credibility and comparability of reported figures. Organisations must also weigh the costs of value-chain engagement, including supplier programmes, capability building for SME suppliers and implications for procurement and other cost centres.
3.15pm	PANEL SESSION: MAKING SUSTAINABILITY REPORTING WORK: FROM DATA GAPS TO DECISION-USEFUL DISCLOSURES Data is the lifeblood of sustainability reporting. Data ownership, flows and connectivity determine reporting quality and the usefulness of disclosures. This session examines the key data challenges organisations face, from identifying where sustainability data sits across finance, sustainability, operations, risk, procurement, HR and IT to establishing a clear data ownership and governance model, including who owns, prepares, reviews and signs off the information. Addressing these challenges also requires sustainability metrics to be connected with financial performance to produce decision-useful disclosures. The panel will also consider how technology and integrated systems, including AI solutions and national platforms such as Bursa Malaysia's Centralised Sustainability Intelligence, can improve data collection, traceability and consistency.
4.30pm	AFTERNOON REFRESHMENTS & NETWORKING
5.00pm	END OF SYMPOSIUM
